

Abortion: The Evangelical Perspective

Matt Everhard has written a fine book on the topic of abortion that I highly recommend to anyone thinking through this topic from a Biblical view. His book addresses the issue of abortion from a uniquely Christian perspective. Everhard begins with what Scripture says about God's creation and ownership of human life and the prohibitions against the taking of that life. He sheds light on the spiritual warfare behind the public political issue and the reasons why what Christians believe about abortion is so critical.

The strengths of Everhard's book are his wonderful logic and his focus on scripture. His coverage of the topic is comprehensive yet easy to read and engaging in style. At times Everhard, a youth minister, writes so conversationally that one can almost hear him engaging an audience of inquisitive teens. The Body of Christ needs such pastoral voices on this issue. My own eighteen year old son has expressed to me that teens want definite answers that the church does not seem willing to give them. Everhard's book is not moral relativism and it is not dogmatic propaganda. It is the straight truth plainly spoken.

Everhard's treatment of the arguments shows thoughtful development and depth without becoming overly academic. I believe his book has appeal for a broad audience across a wide spectrum of ages. Those who read this book will find a thoughtful reflection and solid answers to one of the most urgent moral questions of our day.

As a person engaged in pro-life leadership within the church, I welcome this new book as a well-reasoned resource for those seeking to formulate a Christian view of abortion. It is a helpful guide for students and adults and would form a wonderful basis for a presbytery task force study of abortion. Read it prayerfully and consider how God might be calling you to respond to the holocaust of abortion in our society and even in the church.
